The Tale of the Woman Taken in Adultery

*And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery; and when they had set her in the midst, They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act. Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou? This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him. But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not. So when they continued asking him, he lifted up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her. And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground. And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst. When Jesus had lifted up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee? She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and sin no more.

1 A Treacherous Tradition

The Tale of the Woman Taken in Adultery generally appears at the beginning of the Eighth Chapter of the Gospel Account attributed to John.<sup>1</sup> The tale is well-known to most Protestants, for it is taught frequently from the Protestant Pulpit. Yet, for centuries, textual critics have recognized and flagged the tale as spurious. Though the tale obviously is ancient, appearing in some of the oldest extant manuscripts, the tale is not part of the gospel account attributed to John, nor to any other gospel account; rather, it is a fabrication which has no rightful place in the Canon of Scripture.

The persistence of the tale is due in part to tradition, and in part to emotional appeal.<sup>2</sup> The tale erroneously portrays Christ Jesus as a source of unconditional forgiveness; and the lessons subtly imparted by the tale contradict the teaching of the Scripture. A simple objective examination is sufficient to reveal that the tale merits scorn and contempt, rather than veneration.

<sup>1</sup>In some ancient manuscripts in which the tale appears, it is located at the end of the Gospel Account of John, or near or at the end of the Gospel Account of Luke. This shift of location is a strong indication that the tale is not the work of the author of the gospel account in which it appears.

<sup>2</sup>The case is not unlike that of the Book of Revelation. Commentator Adam Clarke, no mean scholar, notes that the Book of Revelation, though generally recognized by scholars as spurious, generation after generation has been bound into the English Bible, simply because it is considered too magnificent a literary work to be relegated to the waste bin.

1.1 In the Footsteps of the Jew

To knowingly treat a spurious passage as if were genuinely a part of the Scripture is to display contempt for the Scripture. In the epoch of the Incarnation, the Talmudic Jew followed a tradition known as the Tradition of the Elders.<sup>3</sup> Although the Tradition ostensibly is a gloss of the Scripture, the Jew reveres the Tradition above the Scripture. Jesus deprecated the Tradition, calling it “the commandments of men.”

He answered and said unto them, Well hath Esaias prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. For laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do. And he said unto them, Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition.

– Mark 7:6–9

1.2 Scriptural Warnings Unheeded

The Scripture repeatedly warns against embrace and propagation of traditions, tales, myth, and forgeries. As might be expected, the Talmudic Jew is the primary source of such rubbish, for he is the great and perennial enemy of Christ Jesus and of the Church. The Jew is well-practiced in the art of story-telling and counterfeiting, a fact to which history provides an abundance of evidence.<sup>4</sup>

As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine, Neither give heed to fables and endless genealogies, which minister questions, rather than godly edifying which is in faith: so do. Now the end of the commandment is charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conscience, and of faith unfeigned: From which some having swerved have turned aside unto vain jangling; Desiring to be teachers of the law; understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm.

– I Timothy 1:3–7

But refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness.

– I Timothy 4:7

I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; Preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables. But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry.

– II Timothy 4:1–5

Holding fast the faithful word as he hath been taught, that he may be able by sound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainsayers. For there are many unruly and vain talkers and deceivers, specially they of the circumcision: Whose mouths must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake. One of themselves, even a prophet of their own, said, the Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, slow bellies. This witness is true. Wherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith; Not giving heed to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn from the truth.

– Titus 1:9–4

<sup>3</sup>The unregenerate Jew continues to venerate the same tradition. The Tradition of the Elders has been codified and published; in the present day the Tradition is known as the Babylonian Talmud.

<sup>4</sup>The forgeries and counterfeits of the Jew include the Book of Esther, the Book of Revelation, the Masoretic Hebrew Text, the Diary of Anne Frank, the “Holocaust” myth, and the productions of Hollywood.

1.3 The Leaven of the Jew

There is a category of Jewish influence against which the Scripture repeatedly gives warning; it is that which Jesus termed the Leaven of the Jew.<sup>5</sup> Leaven is an agent which alters the entity into which is introduced; moreover, leaven replicates and propagates the transformation. Thus, when a tiny amount of leaven is added to a lump of dough, the entire lump soon is leavened.<sup>6</sup> In the Scripture, leaven generally is used to portray an evil influence, such as doctrinal error or hypocrisy.<sup>7</sup> The Tale of the Woman Taken in Adultery is of the category Leaven of the Jew.

2 Prove All Things

Upon hearing the assertion that the Tale of the Woman Taken in Adultery has no rightful place in the Canon of Scripture, some Protestants respond by charging the messenger with an assault upon the integrity of the Scripture.<sup>8</sup> The more knowledgeable in this group argue that all matters of Canonicity were resolved centuries ago by the so-called “Church Councils.” But even the Protestant who agrees that the Tale of the Woman Taken in Adultery is a fabrication typically argues that the passage nonetheless is specious, portraying behaviour which is consistent with the nature of the incarnate Christ.

But such attitudes disregard a vital exhortation of the Scripture. The Apostle Paul charges the Christian:

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

– I Thessalonians 5:21

In this verse, Paul commands the Christian personally to undertake proof of the teaching of the Scripture.

Very little effort is required to verify the verdict of textual critics, that the Tale of the Woman Taken in Adultery is not part of the Scripture. And a thoughtful comparison of the details of the tale against the Scripture demonstrates that the Jesus portrayed by the tale is not the Christ of the Scripture. Consider the following analysis.

2.1 Where is the Man?

A woman does not commit adultery without an accomplice. If the tale were true and the woman had been taken “in the very act,” the man would have been present and also should have been taken. Jesus would have pointed out the fact that the man also was guilty of adultery and likewise was worthy of death.<sup>9</sup> If the tale were true, Jesus would have pointed out the hypocrisy of the accusers in their failure to arrest and charge the man.

2.2 Jesus Contradicts Moses?

“Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou? This they said, tempting him, that they might have to accuse him.” This is an absurd charge; Jesus does not contradict Moses.<sup>10</sup>

2.3 Writing on the Ground?

“Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not. . . . And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.” This behaviour is absurd, nor is it seen elsewhere in the Gospel Accounts. In his encounters with the Jews, Jesus does not ignore the opposition and never is he silent.<sup>11</sup> Interpreters make many

<sup>5</sup>Matthew 16:5–12, Mark 8:13–21, Luke 12:1–3. Consider also Matthew 15:1–9, Mark 7:1–13, Colossians 2:8–23, I Timothy 4:1–11, II Timothy 4:3–4, Titus 1:10–16, I Peter 1:18–21.

<sup>6</sup>I Corinthians 5:6–8, Galatians 5:7–10.

<sup>7</sup>However, leaven also is used to portray the beneficial influence associated with the Kingdom of God. As the Gospel of the Kingdom is proclaimed, taught, and embraced, those who receive the truth become salt and light to Society, Matthew 5:13–16; thus does the Gospel have an irresistible and ever-growing influence which transforms Society, Matthew 13:33, Luke 13:20–21.

<sup>8</sup>Among these, of course, is the chap who in all sincerity asserts, “If the King James Version was good enough for the Apostle Paul, it is good enough for me.”

<sup>9</sup>Leviticus 20:10, “And the man that committeth adultery with another man’s wife, even he that committeth adultery with his neighbour’s wife, the adulterer and the adulteress shall surely be put to death.”

<sup>11</sup>This is not equivalent to the silence of Jesus during the interrogations he faced on the night in which he was betrayed.

preposterous claims for what Jesus supposedly wrote on the ground.

2.4 The Law of Moses Hamstrung?

The exhortation “He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her;” makes a mockery of the Law of Moses. There is no man who does not sin,<sup>12</sup> yet the Law of Moses specifies punishment.

2.5 Conscientious Jews?

“And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one. . .” This is absurd. In none of the confrontations of Jesus with the hostile Jew is there the slightest indication that the Jew is repentant constrained by conscience.

2.6 Jesus Winks at Sin?

Though adultery is sinful, the woman neither confesses sin, requests mercy, nor gives indication of repentance. Consequently, there is no basis for the release, “Neither do I condemn thee.” Jesus forgives sin, but Jesus does not wink at sin.<sup>13</sup>

3 Conclusion

The Tale of the Woman Taken in Adultery, generally beloved by Protestants, is contemptible rubbish; it is Leaven of the Jew, against which Jesus repeatedly warned.

The tale enjoys an undeserved berth in the Eighth Chapter of the Gospel Account of John. From generation to generation, the tale continues to be bound into the Bible simply because of its emotional appeal and the power of tradition.

The tale teaches absurd and diabolical concepts which are contrary to the teaching of the Scripture. These concepts include:

- In adultery, guilt pertains only to the woman.
- The Law of Moses is of no practical consequence, inasmuch as the Law prescribes punishments which cannot be applied, there being no one of the category “he who is without sin” to inflict them.
- The Talmudic Jew is restrained by conscience.
- Jesus winks at sin.

When considering the Tale of the Woman Taken in Adultery, the great matter at issue is respect for the integrity of the Canon of Scripture. The man who has the understanding that the tale is not part of the Scripture, yet teaches the tale as if it were part of the Scripture, thereby commits fraud.

Only God can forgive sin; but the tale obviously is fictitious. To concoct a tale which falsely attributes an action or an assertion to the Lord God is to blaspheme.

Now, with multiple sources of deception, all threatening the integrity of the Scripture,

The activity of the Jews of Berea in their daily searching of the Scriptures indicates that an abundance of false teaching was in circulation during the Apostolic Era.<sup>14</sup>

Some Protestants concern themselves with the translation of the Bible, and an increasing number of translations are available in the present day. But rare is the Protestant who looks beneath the translation to the critical edition from which the translation was made. And even when there is consideration of the critical edition, that typically is limited to the Greek of the so-called “New Testament.”

<sup>13</sup>Though in some periods of time and with some people, God has winked at sin in the sense of disregard, the tolerance ended with the Incarnation and the imminence of the era of New Covenant; consider Acts 17:30.
